Bricker Graydon Wyatt's Tad Myre was recently quoted in Louisville Public Media's article, "Louisville Bats celebrate the Black Caps." Tad, a health care attorney based in the firm's Louisville office, is also a baseball historian who is frequently called upon for his knowledge of the Negro Leagues and Louisville baseball history.

The article highlights the Louisville Black Caps, a Negro League team that played in Louisville during the 1930s, and the Louisville Bats' efforts to honor the team and preserve its history. Tad, who is a member of the Society for American Baseball Research, provided historical perspective on Black Caps player Felton Snow, describing Snow's role as a teammate and eventual manager.

Tad also provided photographs and historical materials featured throughout the article, including images related to Snow and the Black Caps. His ongoing research and interest in Negro League history have helped bring greater attention to the stories of Louisville's Black baseball players and their contributions to the sport.
